1 ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The project core team (Richard Carter, Kerstin Danert, Peter Ball, Ronnie Rwamwanja, and Jamil Ssebalu) has enjoyed committed and enthusiastic partnership with a wide range of individuals and organisations, without whom little of value could have been achieved. In particular we would like to thank the following members of the wider team:

- the Directorate of Water Development
- Mpigi district,
- Mukono district,
- the many small business with whom we have worked,
- the numerous individuals who have acted as consultants or assistants to the project,
- the four Cranfield MSc students whose findings informed the project at various stages,
- and last but not least those who provided funding for the work: DFID, DANIDA, UNICEF, SIDA, DWD, Mpigi, Mukono and Jinja districts, Water Aid, the PAF, and an anonymous donor in the USA.

It is our hope that the work which we have started in this short project can continue and build on the foundation provided by the many partners and stakeholders involved.

2 BACKGROUND

This report contributes to the findings, implications, and future plans of a project, initiated by Cranfield University (Silsoe, UK) entitled “Private Sector Participation in Low Cost Water Well Drilling”. The project was funded by DFID from July 1998 to June 2001, with additional funding partners (Government of Uganda, DANIDA, SIDA, UNICEF, Water Aid, and an anonymous donor) joining at various stages throughout this three-year period.

The three-year Project had two overall aims:

- to develop, and transfer to the private sector, technology suitable for affordable shallow well construction
- to research the process of technology transfer and the conditions necessary for its success, in the context of rural water source construction

The first aim of the project was addressed through three main objectives or outputs:

- ◆ the design, field testing, and evaluation of a new human-powered drilling rig (the “Pounder rig”)
- ◆ the uptake of the technology by a small number of contractors, and their use of the rig in commercial contracts
- ◆ the establishment of a sustainable means by which the rig and subsequent spare parts will be made available in country

The research aspect of the project used the technology transfer and uptake process as a gateway to action research. The process of developing the technology and introducing it into the private sector, and the concurrent investigation and learning process, were intertwined in such a way that the project informed the research, and the research informed the project. Both benefited.

The overall research question was:

“what enabling conditions and external actions are necessary to stimulate and strengthen effective rural water supply service delivery by the private sector?”

Interest: 2% per month and up-front commission rate of 2% of the total loan sought.
